Tom Raffield Verso Floor Lamp

The Verso Floor Lamp gets its name from the Latin word for 'spin', highlighting the swooping motion of the wooden arches. Three pieces of wood are steam-bent to form the ornate curves that bend around the light source, partially encapsulating it. When illuminated, pockets of light escape through the gaps in the frame, filling the surrounding space with patterned rays. The inside of the timber structure is bathed in light, creating a warm glow that contrasts against the outer frame left in shadows.

The Verso Floor Lamp is available in sustainably sourced oak or walnut timber. The natural tones of wood suit a range of decors, both classic and contemporary. Its sweeping, asymmetrical form draws the eye and ignites the imagination. Designed to look different depending on the angle it is viewed, the Verso Floor Lamp showcases its varying form to add a touch of playfulness to any interior. Display with other pieces from the Verso Collection to create a cohesive theme and a sense of balance in your home.
